MX, synfuels raise questions

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Two of the most labor-intensive, far-reaching development programs in the country's history are going ahead in the West without the planners of one project giving much thought to the other, says the director of Colorado's Department of Employment.

Speaking at a conference sponsored by the Western Governors' Policy Office, Director Robert J. Ore said both the MX missile project and synthetic fuels development have the capability of single-handedly disrupting the western landscape. Their combined effects may be more than the West or the rest of the nation has bargained for, he said.

"In effect, no one has addressed the question, 'Can the West have MX and energy development at the same time?'" Ore said.

The conference, which runs through today, is focusing on manpower needs. But so far, experts from the military, energy companies and state governments are raising more questions than providing answers.

Reagan, Ito discuss imports

WASHINGTON — President Reagan met Tuesday with Japanese Foreign Minister Matsushige Ito in a meeting of voluntary restrictions on auto imports. But Sen. John Danforth urged the chief executive to take stiffer steps, saying "if we dance around the issue, nothing will come of it."

While White House officials let it be known that Reagan is seeking voluntary import restrictions to help the ailing U.S. auto industry, the formal line after the president's meeting with Ito was that the two leaders merely exchanged views.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig Jr. declared: "We don't have a deadline."

Meanwhile, Danforth, R-Mo., and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee

told Reagan that if he didn't act, Congress probably would. Baker described "a building pressure in the Congress to do something by statute if the Japanese don't do something voluntarily."

Space shuttle undergoes test

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A towering, silo-shaped aluminum tank was patched up and ready Tuesday for a critical liquid fueling test to determine whether the space shuttle Columbia will fly early next month.

"Everything's go," said NASA spokesman Dick Young at the Kennedy Space Center. "We'll start tanking early tomorrow."

The pumping of liquid oxygen and hydrogen into the 154-foot-tall external tank which feeds the Columbia's main engines will place greater stress on cork panels covering its aluminum skin than the launch itself, space agency officials say.

This will determine whether a $2.5 million repair job on 32 of the panels was successful. If this and a similar test on Friday are trouble-free, officials may be able to set a specific launch date.

The $8 billion shuttle program, already more than two years behind schedule, is tentatively set for its maiden launch the week of April 5.

Franklin arraigned for murder

SALT LAKE CITY — One day after being sentenced to life imprisonment for violating the civil rights of two slain black joggers, Joseph Paul Franklin Tuesday was arraigned on first-degree murder charges in those deaths that could put him in front of a firing squad.

Although not asked to enter a plea during the arraignment, Franklin has repeatedly said he is innocent. He has claimed police are framing him because of his admittedly racist views.

Manacled hand and foot, Franklin was calm as he stood before 6th Circuit Judge Larry R. Keller and heard the murder charges read.

Franklin said he had no attorney to represent him on the state charges, or money with which to hire one. Keller heard Franklin's handcuffs removed so he could raise his right hand and swear under oath he could not afford a lawyer.

Cost of loving up with living

NEW YORK — Feeling battered by the latest boost in the Consumer Price Index? When it comes to inflation, the government figures don't even begin to measure the pain, according to a financial analyst who has his own indexes on everything from the "Cost of Loving" to the "Cost of Living It Up."

"If the CPI accurately measures inflation for an average American family, it's purely an accident," says Raymond F. DeVoe Jr. He says the index doesn't reflect changing lifestyles or spending patterns. Nor does it cover a lot of the products — some of them admittedly frivolous — that people spend money on.

Take the "Cost of Loving." DeVoe calculated what a first date, courtship and honeymoon would have cost in terms of 1955 prices and lifestyles. He added up the cost of the same items today and found that the median increase in prices was 420 percent. During the same period, the Consumer Price Index has risen 228 percent. The February increase, announced Tuesday, was 1 percent.

Haig meets with Soviet envoy

WASHINGTON — Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig met privately on Tuesday to open a dialogue between the two nations which Dobrynin said will continue.

The session was the first between the two men since Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev was proposed on Feb. 23 in Moscow that he and President Reagan schedule a summit conference to discuss the outstanding issues between their two nations.

Emerging from a luncheon meeting with Haig at the State Department, Dobrynin said he and Haig had held "a good businesslike lunch" and had agreed the dialogue they had begun will continue.

But he shed no light on whether a summit will be held anytime soon.

'Drug use increasing,' says undercover agent

By DANE RIGBY
Universe Staff Writer

Clive Winn works undercover for the Utah State Narcotics and Liquor Law Enforcement Agency. He joined the force six years ago after spending five years with BYU Security as a patrol officer, detective and sergeant.

"This job is different from working as a police officer," Winn said. "It is a job that requires you to play a role in a foreign atmosphere. You have to mold yourself to the kind of people you're with. You have to be a good liar too."

Winn said a narcotics agent has to look the part, know drugs and establish credibility with the people he works with.

Winn is an active member of the LDS Church and his job often conflicts with his religion, he said.

"Sometimes I have to take a drink, hang out in places or be something I'm not. It's like being an actor," he said. "There have been times when I've been on a deep cover assignment in a different place, with a different name and it's been hard for me to figure out what is me. Sometimes it gets confusing."

Long hair

"I was an elders quorum president before I took the job," he said. "I grew long hair and a beard when I first began. I remember one lady came up to my wife and said she was sorry for what happened to me."

Winn said his job hasn't been easy on his family. He often is away at night. Because his is a 24-hour job there have been times where just being seen with his family in public has caused problems with his work.

"It's a hassle to work undercover. But the enjoyment comes when you arrest people who really ought to be arrested," Winn said. "That's what I enjoy — hurting those who break the law."

"We've caused a lot of paranoia in Utah County. We've had impact on the community. The biggest problem we're doing is his job is expensive."

"Everyone says we need to get real dealers — the big ones," said. "Most of the people we get are street people. Dealers insult themselves with dummies."

Look the part

"You've got to be up on the spending money and buying dope to get to these people. You have to get the part, know drugs and have a good vehicle. When you consider a car, the man, surveillance and buys, it is a big expense for a department."

Winn said the public wants action when property is damaged, what they are robbed or when the crime has a victim. But when the crime is victimless, the public isn't so quick to respond.

"If we want to conquer the drug problem, the support has to come from the public," Winn said. "Amuse me to hear people say drugs are on the decrease. It's my opinion that they are on the increase. It will always be on the increase."

According to Winn, there is an increasing amount of marijuana in high schools.

"The growing attitude is that marijuana is not a narcotic," Winn said. "I think marijuana is dangerous. There is a lot of abuse and I see a lot of psychological dependency."

Garth Fisher:

Exercise builds endurance

By DEBBIE GIUNTA
Universe Staff Writer

Your "personal energy crisis" can be alleviated through aerobic exercise, according to the director of BYU's Human Performance Research Center.

Dr. A. Garth Fisher, a professor of physical education, spoke at Tuesday's Forum assembly in the Marriott Center.

Before Fisher's remarks, BYU President Jeffrey R. Holland honored the men's basketball team and announced that Danny Ainge had just been given the Seventh Annual Eastman Award in New York City.

Dr. James R. Kearl, a professor of economics, was also honored by the Blue Key Society as professor of the month.

Fisher said a personal energy crisis is not one of insufficient energy, but an inability to use the energy already in the body. He also said a person can increase his or her physical endurance capacity through proper exercise.

Fisher said some people have enough energy stored in them to last four to six months, but it remains untapped. He said as long as oxygen is available to produce the energy needed, the energy supply is limitless.

When a person is poorly conditioned, he often feels short of breath while exercising, Fisher said. "The breathlessness we feel is not the fault of the lungs," Fisher explained. "They have much more capacity to supply oxygen to the blood stream than the blood has capacity to carry it to the various cells of the body."

Oxygen production is dependent on the amount of blood that is circulated through the body, Fisher said. Although some aspects of the body's ability to pump large quantities of blood are genetic, he said, "All of us can improve our aerobic or oxidative capacities through proper training techniques."

He recommended activities such as jogging, walking, swimming, bicycling, rope jumping and mini-tramping because they can be carried on for long periods of time without stopping to involve the large muscles of the body.

"Duration is related to intensity," Fisher said. It's better to participate in a moderate activity for a longer period of time, than a more intense activity for a short length of time.

Frequent exercise is also important, he said. "We must exercise at least three times a week for cardiovascular conditioning changes to occur," Fisher said.

Fisher said the best way to get started on an exercise regime is to just plan it in your program and go. He also suggested exercising at a specific time and with other people.

"Exercise seems to become a little addictive or at least habit forming," he said. "I know that through proper exercise you can combat your own personal energy crisis and will be able to enjoy the blessings of 'to run and not be weary and to walk and not faint.'"

Speaking of the basketball team, Holland said, "We wish to pay tribute to Coach Frank A. Alexander, who molded this team into a national contender and personally did so much with the Eastern press to comment on and give emphasis to our unique mission at BYU."

"He was modest in victory and gracious in defeat and we are very proud of him."

Young mothers can continue daily education

By GARRY WEISS
Universe Staff Writer

If you were to drop in with a group of women children while they were being taught child support, crocheting or quilting, you could find you were in an LDS Relief Society meeting. However, there is a local high school also runs that way.

Young Mothers High School, in Provo School District, was started in 1973 to provide an alternative high school-completion program to assist those who would otherwise drop out because of pregnancy or having children to take care of, said Raty, coordinator of the high school, said.

It also gives social and emotional support in a time of their life," she said.

There are about 25 young mothers' schools in Utah. "The first one in the state was in Granite School District," she said.

Raty said classes are offered in required subjects and electives. "The requirements are that there are live in the Provo School District, have attended a school here, be expecting or have a baby, or be married," she said.

Raty said there is no age requirement for enrollment.

The youngest girl we've had was 14 years old," she said. The Salt Lake School District and some 12- and 13-year-olds.

There is rarely a discipline problem, she said. The biggest problem, she said, is attendance because there are two people who can get sick.

Raty said there are 31 students presently enrolled, 80 percent married.

Most of the women are grateful to be able to graduate without having to go to the regular high school.

Provo City appoints

new water director

Provo City has appointed a new director of its water and waste department.

George Robinson, who will replace Merrill Ham, the present director, said his move to Las Vegas to Provo was like coming home.

Ham is leaving the city government to go to an engineering and consulting firm.

Merrill Bingham is a very capable man," Robinson said. "I'm not going to try to fill his shoes, I've got my own experience."

Bingham graduated from Utah State University with a bachelor's degree in engineering.

At that time he has worked as an engineer for the City of Provo, the Palmdale Irrigation District, and for the past nine years, the Las Vegas Valley Water District.

Bingham said he has served in municipal engineering and management capacities in the City of Provo, the Palmdale Irrigation District, and for the past nine years, the Las Vegas Valley Water District.

Bingham said he will represent the city in water matters and work on the engineering and design for the city's water systems.

doesn't fit in a regular high school," one student said.

Another student said the school is a lot easier and teaches students subjects they will use in daily life and with their families. "The pressures here aren't like regular high schools. I was going to drop out until I found out about this."

One student, who graduates in May, said one can get close to people here. "One can work at her own pace," another student added.

"A person cannot get anywhere without a high school education," a student said. "More people need to know about this program."

"Don't make this look too inviting," a student said.

UVH offers mental stress therapy

By JAN TAYLOR
Universe Staff Writer

People suffering from emotional or mental stress may receive help before their problems become serious enough to require long-term hospitalization, according to a Utah Valley Hospital official.

Few people know about the hospital's unit for short-term emotional help, said Ken Tuttle, director of UVH's Mental Health Services.

The services involved in the hospital stay are short and acute, said Barbara Boyle, head psychiatric nurse of the unit.

"The maximum stay is 30 days," she said. "But we have an extensive out-patient department."

After the patients go home, they continue to receive treatment on an out-patient basis, Mrs. Boyle said. The type of therapy may vary from individual to group therapy. The goal of the unit is to help patients adjust so they can not only return home quickly, but so they can maintain out-patient status after release.

"We do have some rehospitalized," she said.

While the unit is nearly two years old, it has only been in its present location since November, Mrs. Boyle said. The new location is more conducive to group therapy because the rooms resemble hotel rooms rather than those on a regular hospital floor, she said.

"We try to make it as home-like as possible," she said.

One method the staff uses to help the patients recover is dressing in street clothes, Mrs. Boyle said.

"What we stress is getting them in a routine," she said. "We encourage them to get up in the morning, get dressed and go socialize in the family room with the other patients."

Mrs. Boyle said the most common problem patients have is depression.

"Depressed people have a low energy level," she said. She said the staff shows the film "Mormon Women and Depression," a film produced by KSL-TV a few years ago, on a weekly basis to help women overcome depression.

People of any age can suffer from emotional problems, Mrs. Boyle said.

"We have had patients as young as 12 and as old as 89," she said.

"The people who come here simply aren't functioning very well," Mrs. Boyle said. "Their lives have become so stressful that their coping mechanisms have broken down."

Dr. Robert Crist, Mental Health Services medical director, said the patients are ordinary people who have stressful situations with which they can't cope.

Mrs. Boyle said the Mental Health Services unit has an extensive staff to help treat the patients.

'Stone Tables'

Moses comes to life

By GINA ALLEN
Universe Staff Writer

After eight years, "Stone Tables" has returned to BYU. Orson Scott Card and the Mormon Players bring Moses to life in this contemporary version of the biblical story.

The play, written by Card, presents the story of Moses — from his birth to the death of his brother, Aaron. Although most of the people attending the Monday matinee in the Pardoe Theater were either gray haired or balding, people of all ages would enjoy the show.

The Mormon Players exhibited a great amount of energy and versatility. All cast members danced and sang — most of the cast took several parts.

The original music, written by Robert Stoddard, added tremendously to the show. Written with a jazz feeling, it lent life and color to the timeless story. Live singing and instrumentals were a welcome departure from recorded music.

The play had the potential of becoming another "Jesus Christ Superstar," but it wasn't offensive. Only one song was a little too "jazzy." Girls holding microphones, swaying back and forth and singing about Moses were reminiscent of the rock story of Christ.

Matt Bean, a junior from Washington, D.C., majoring in theater, gave an outstanding portrayal of Jethro. Alan Hallmark, a freshman from New York, played a convincing Aaron. Moses was well played by David Spencer, a senior from Nephi majoring in theater.

Spencer gave a fine performance of the stuttering Moses; he convinced the audience he really experienced the conversion Moses did.

The cast did a good job of scenery changes and time passages without the use of props, sets, costumes or aging makeup. They were aided by a small circular screen at the back of the stage on which slides were shown telling what was happening. The screen was distracting at times, although sometimes it was necessary to help the audience figure out what was happening.

One of the most exciting parts of the program was the tussle between the daughters of Jethro and the men who came to steal their sheep. There was a lot of action. It was rather comical when the girls kicked the men in the shins, and with the help of Moses, fended them off.

David Spencer plays Moses in a scene from "Stone Tables," a modern interpretation of the life of Moses.

Students should bring a resume and photograph, and be prepared to sing a popular "up-tempo" piece and a ballad. No registration is necessary for those trying out for dance positions only. Those auditions will be held April 6, from 3 to 6 p.m. in 126 SOCH. Interested students who will be freshmen or transfer students next year should send a resume and a cassette tape to the BYU Entertainment Division by April 1.

Arsonists intimidate German; he helps burn up his own home

Arsonists attack part of BYU's McKay Building in a comedy play this weekend performed by students in the German department.

The play will show at 8 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday in 115 MCKB. Although admission is free, tickets should be picked up before the performances in Room 270 of the Maeser Building.

The play, "Biedermann und die Brandstifter," tells the story of a man so frightened of someone setting his home on fire, he ends up providing a group of arsonists with the matches they use to blow up his house.

Unlike other plays put on by the department, this production will be entirely in German. For those who do not speak the language, a synopsis of the play is available.

"I think everyone who has been to Germany or has an interest in the country will be interested in the play, even if they don't understand the language," said Jim Hepfinger, who plays one of the arsonists.

The audience follows the story of the Biedermanns and their unwelcome lodgers who, unbeknownst to Biedermann, are a group of arsonists.

Biedermann sees them storing barrels of gasoline and ignition equipment in their room, but does little about it, not wishing to be suspicious. He has the attitude that one must trust one's fellow men.

"Frisch was in Czechoslovakia and Germany after World War I," said Hepfinger.

"He saw what was happening with the Nazis, and the party used intimidation to achieve its ends."

"This play shows a similar type of situation — disaster is inevitable. Frisch did not necessarily intend this drama as propaganda against totalitarianism, yet he does ask us whether we are trapped like the Biedermanns and says, 'it could never happen to us.'

"This play has a message. If we just see the comedy aspect and miss the message, then the subtitle of the play 'A Learning Play Without a Lesson' applies."

ennessee-BYU matchup occurred once in ball this season and the two schools meet — on the tennis court Thursday when they meet the 16th-ranked Volunteers in the on Coleman Classic.

Coleman Classic is in Wichita, Kan., and eight-team field. The classic takes its from the Coleman Fuel magnate who is a buff.

BYU men's tennis team takes an 11-7 dual into the Coleman Classic, which is the am tourney the Cougars have entered this BYU is still savoring its first-place finish in st recent competition at the Las Vegas Invitational a couple of weeks ago.

Wichita, the Cougars meet Tennessee at 8 Thursday. The other teams in the tourna- are Wichita State, Arkansas-Little Rock, ern Illinois-Edwardsville, Michigan, oma State and Wake Forest.

"re excited to play Tennessee," says BYU Larry Hall. "We haven't been able to them and we'll be playing indoors. But we was good to play at near sea level in Las where we received a confidence booster." if the Cougars in the starting six spots have ng records. Sophomore Rich Bohne leads am with a 16-9 record.

"It was a big surprise," said Ainge, who was notified of the award Saturday before the Virginia game.

"There are so many great basket- ball players," he said. "It was the last thing on my mind."

there with the JV cheerleaders and BYU Security Police present just like a normal home game.

It seems that last week's problems with the display of spirit were the result of enthusiastic students seeking comradeship to share their ex- perience, but lacked a proper place. Not only will this help control the problem of mayhem by giving them a place to centralize their activity, by confinement to the Marriott school spirit and a place for many to see the game who do not have ade- quate viewing equipment.

NO votes amazing

Editor:

After reading the election results I sat back, amazed at those among us at this school who voted NO to retir- ing the jersey of one of the greatest athletes to ever attend this univer- sity. Not only has this individual performed well on the court but he has brought recognition to this uni- versity that comes along once in a lifetime.

To be exact, there were 778 people who had the nerve to cast a dis- senting vote. I attribute this to their understanding of what even goes on at this school — they don't have any understanding! I'm sure there are those among the 778 who say athletics has no part at a university and think all athletes are about as smart as the sidewalk. To these peo- ple I say BULL!

To those of you (the 778), I wish to update you on the academic suc- cess of Danny Ainge. Not only has he been selected to every post-season All-American team, he has been selected to the Academic All- America team. Here is an example of the true student-athlete. In clos- ing, I bid my farewell to those 778. With fans like you, we don't need enemies.

ND-UK facts wrong

Editor:

Please, Kevin, get your facts right before you print them. Notre Dame has NEVER played Kentucky in Lexington. All games between UK and Notre Dame have been played, to date, in Louisville, a "neutral" court. (Beginning next year, however, the games will be played at the two schools.)

Diana Deen
Lexington, Ky.

Ainge is BYU's first consensus All-America basketball player, receiving the honor from The Associated Press, Basketball Writers Association, United Press International, The Sporting News and Pizza Hut.

Ainge, accompanied by his wife Michelle and 15-month-old daughter Ashley, was honored at a luncheon Tuesday by repre- sentatives from the Eastman-Kodak company and the media.

BYU Coach Frank Arnold said the Eastman award, which is com- parable to football's Heisman award, is very politically motivated.

"We didn't do any politicking for this award," said Arnold. "That's what makes it more meaningful."

The award is selected from an All-America team voted by the National Association of Basketball Coaches. Other nominees were Ralph Sampson, Virginia; Isiah Thomas, Indiana; Mark Aguirre, DePaul; and Steve Johnson, Oregon State.

Players receiving the award in past years include Larry Bird, Michael Brooks, and Marques Johnson.

Ainge said he has been flooded by the media since the announcement, and attended a news conference Tuesday from 10:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. He will also appear on the Good Morning America show today.

Most of the writers, he said, are interested in his decision to play professional baseball instead of basketball, said Ainge.

"I'm getting tired of it," he said, adding that he had firmly decided to stay with baseball after he signed a three-year contract with the Toronto Blue Jays for a reported $500,000.

"It was a decision I made with my wife," he added. "I enjoy basketball but I prefer the leisurely pace of baseball. There is not all that pounding up and down the floor as in basketball."

18-year veteran Rose aims for hitting record

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Pete Rose, a durable veteran of 18 years, has earned the right to dream of one of baseball's most remarkable achieve- ments — becoming the No. 1 hitter in the National League.

Rose, who will be 40 years old April 14, needs just 74 hits to pass Stan Musial as the all-time NL leader in career hits, a goal he'll reach early this season unless he can't play.

"You don't play for records," Rose said recently at the Philadelphia Phillies spring training camp.

"But records are part of the incentive that keeps you going when you're my age. The most important incen- tive thing ... should be to try and play in the World Series."

Rose has been in five World Series, including last year as first baseman for the Phillies. He has the reputation of a winning player, a guy who would run through fire to reach home plate safely.

If he passes Musial, only Hank Aaron, who got some of his hits as an American League player, and the all-time leader, Ty Cobb, will rank above Rose on the career hit list. Musial has 3,630, Aaron 3,771 and Cobb an incredible 4,191. Rose, with 185 hits last year, is at 3,557.

After playing in an all-star game at Philadelphia on Sunday, Ainge will head to the Blue Jays' spring training quarters in Florida.

During Ainge's four years at BYU, he won one NCAA record, seven WAC records, and 10 BYU records. Many should hold for a long time.

Ainge scored in double figures for 112 consecutive games, breaking the NCAA record of 101. He is also among the top 25 career point leaders in the NCAA with 2,467 points.

His WAC records include most career points, most career field goals attempted and made, most personal fouls and WAC points.

Ainge also has seven games scoring over 30 points, including a 40-point performance against Oral Roberts University in 1978.

The 6-4 guard finished his collegiate basketball career Saturday when BYU bowed to Virginia in the quarterfinals of the NCAA tour- nament. Some of Ainge's finest mo- ments came in the tournament, in- cluding a 37-point performance against UCLA and a full-court drive in the final seconds of the match against Notre Dame that gave BYU the one-point victory.

"Of course we were disappointed to lose, but we weren't ashamed," said Ainge. "We did a lot better than most people expected."

"I'll remember this all my life," he said.

Arnold said the award couldn't have gone to a more deserving per- son. "Danny is a well-rounded per- son in all aspects of life," he said. "I'm glad to have the whole world see what kind of athlete we have at BYU."

Ainge said he will be an assistant coach at BYU during the off-season. "I'm looking forward to it," said Ainge. "It'll be a chance to be around the guys again, and I can help in recruiting and scouting."

Y golfers remain at 5th

The BYU women's golf team remained in fifth place in the Husky Invitational at Redmond, Wash., af- ter the second round of play Tues- day.

BYU's score of 651 is 13 strokes behind first-place San Jose State who has 638.

Cougar Kelli Antolock leads the field with a 150 total, Julie Inkster of San Jose State is one stroke behind her with a 151 total. BYU's Koreen Gibson is seventh in scoring with a 160 total.

"Kelli is our no. 5 player and leads her teammates by 10 or more strokes," said Coach Gary Howard. "Something's got to be wrong."

Other BYU totals are Chris Lehmann with 171, Nancy Brad- bury with 173, and Carla Duncan who was sick Monday and shot an 84 on Tuesday.

Intermountain energy to be symposium topic

James Anthony, of the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power, will discuss the controversial Intermountain Power Project and its impact on Utah as part of the 22nd Annual Engineering and Technology Symposium Thursday.

Anthony is one of several experts who will speak on energy developments in the Intermountain Region from 8:45 to 11 a.m. in the Varsity Theatre, said James H. Polve, chairman of the symposium.

Oil shale, tar sands, geothermal energy and coal gasification will also be discussed in the opening session of the symposium by speakers Alex G. Oblad, a professor at the University of Utah; Ralph Coates, of Mountain Fuel Supply Co.; and Val Eynon, of Utah Power and Light Co.

The symposium, sponsored by the College of Engineering Sciences and Technology in conjunction with the Division of Continuing Education, will be from 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in the Wilkinson Center.

Polve said it is primarily for practicing engineers and technologists in the intermountain area, but students may attend to get a taste of the profession.

Polve, professor of mechanical engineering who has been the symposium chairman for 10 years, said speakers are chosen by a committee consisting of a representative from each department of the college.

"We ask ourselves, 'What do we need this year?' What will help the engineering and technology communities and what are their interests?"

The three sessions of the symposium will include six speakers discussing ways in which productivity can be increased, said Polve.

A luncheon will follow in the Wilkinson Center Ballroom featuring Pres. Jeffrey Holland as speaker.

Family science students to be honored

More than one hundred students in the Family, Home and Social Science College will be receiving special recognition tonight in the Smith Family Living Center's step-down lounge.

Awards and scholarships will be presented to students who have exhibited academic excellence and who have not already received scholarships.

"This is an annual event for faculty members and peers to become aware of students' achievements and accomplishments," said Yvonne Romney of the College Advancement Center.

"Tonight we will also present gifts like a silver tray, luggage and encyclopedias," she said.

Following a speech by Associate Professor Harold Miller and the presentation of scholarships and gifts, those students who have already received four-year scholarships, Spencer W. Kimball Scholars, National Merit Scholars and Trustee Scholars will be recognized.

Students being honored may invite one guest and their parents. Three hundred guests and faculty members are expected to attend.

Financial security tips to be given in seminar

Learning to minimize the impact of inflation on personal financial situations is the topic of the "Your Personal and Financial Estate Plan" seminar which begins today.

Inflation, disorganization in personal finances, lack of investment and borrowing skills and poor communication among family members will be major financial problems faced by families in the 1980s, said Robert F. Bohn, associate professor of business management at BYU and instructor for the seminar.

Participants will learn how to plan for present and future financial security and other money related skills, Bohn said.

The seminar will offer instruction about the relative returns and risks of alternative investments, the evaluation of individual financial situations with regard to investment strategies, the importance of creative financing techniques, using real estate to reduce taxes and the four rates of return on real estate income property, he said.

"Inflation can be understood and battled effectively by proper planning," Bohn said.

"A personal money management system and learning to communicate with one's spouse about financial matters will make the achievement of each individual financial goal more easily attainable," he said.

Students' health questions to be answered by specialists

The BYU Health Center will sponsor a sak yak entitled "90 Minutes with the Health Center," Friday at noon in the Varsity Theatre.

Dr. Cloyd C. Hofheins, director of the McDonald Health Center, will direct the hour-long discussion and question and answer session.

"We want lots of audience participation," said Hofheins. "There will be no holds barred in answering medicine. Among the specialists will be a pediatrician, a gynecologist, an orthopedist, a surgeon, a dermatologist and a podiatrist.

If time permits, the discussion will include a demonstration of clinical hypnosis.

Career fair to start Thursday

In conjunction with Utah's Free Enterprise Week, a Career Fair will be held Thursday at Mountain View High School.

auditorium and will start at p.m.

"There will be a welcome by mayor and 15 mini-presentations," Leavitt said.

Displays will be in the media center, said Delores Bradshaw, director of public relations in the Al School District. There will be plays from companies show career opportunities.

The concluding speaker will be Utah Lt. Gov. David Monson.

It will be held in the high school

Relief Society influence to be symposium theme

Individual accomplishments and the influence of the Relief Society on LDS Church growth will be discussed at the Women's History Symposium April 1 at 10 a.m. in the Pardee Theater of the HFAC. Registration for the symposium is $2.

"This is a golden opportunity for the women on campus to become familiar with the strong role women have played in the church," said Ida Smith, director of the Women's Research Institute and co-chairwoman of the Joseph Fielding Smith Institute for Church History. The symposium is being sponsored by both organizations.

Shirley Thomas, counselor in the General Relief Society presidency, will begin the morning session, speaking on the Relief Society today. Other subjects include: "Relief Society and Priesthood: Grain Storage as a Case Study" and "Don't Go In at the Big End of the Ham: Relief Society Curriculum in the Progressive Era."

Belle Spafford, former Relief Society president, will speak at the luncheon from 12:15 to 1:45. The luncheon will cost $3.75.

The opening speaker for the afternoon session, at 2:10 p.m., will be Carol Cornwall Madsen.

A mounted exhibit stands in natural pose. Taxidermists are displaying their art in the Monte L. Bean Life Science Museum through April 7.

Museum mounts 'stuff' in taxidermists' display

Twenty Utah taxidermists from Farmington to Salem are showing their "stuff" at a display in the Monte L. Bean Life Science Museum through April 7, according to Wesley "Skip" Skidmore, museum manager and taxidermist.

"This is the first show of its kind in Utah," said Skidmore. He said the display is part of the Mormon Festival of Arts. "Taxidermy is an art," he explained. "It is the art of collecting, mounting and preserving animals as they appeared when alive."

He said taxidermists use many different materials and methods to prepare specimens for display. One way, he said, is to make an artificial body of paper-mache or small wood shavings wrapped tightly with string and cover it with the tanned skin of the animal.

Heavy wires may be used to take the place of bones and give the specimen rigidity, particularly in wings for birds. Specimens can also be frozen in regular freezers and then placed in a machine that freeze-dries them so they hold their native position, he said. "These fellows have all their organs in them," said Skidmore, pointing to two small chipmunks mounted on a log.

Skidmore said taxidermists use glass eyes, plastic claws and rubber tongues to make the animals look realistic. The arrangement of animals in attractive settings is a big part of taxidermy, he said. "Stands have a lot to do with it," he said.

"This fellow likes to mount animals in a peaceful attitude," said Skidmore, pointing to the work of David Anderson of Farmington, Utah.

One taxidermist, Jay Nielson of Salt Lake City, makes fiberglass reproductions of fish. "They last a long time. They won't crack like the skin mounts do sometimes," Skidmore said. "Skin mounts" are specimens with actual fish skin stretched over Styrofoam bodies, he said.

Skidmore said admission to the display is free.

Mervyn's to close Sundays, according to spokeswoman Mervyn's has decided to follow the lead of major stores in the Provo-Orem area and close on Sundays, according to a spokeswoman.

Lizette Weiss, public information manager for Mervyn's, told The Daily Universe in a telephone interview last month it was standard Mervyn's policy for stores to remain open on Sunday. Mervyn's, a retail store headquartered in Hayward, Calif., has several stores located throughout Utah, all of which are open on Sundays.

"Since that time, we've done a survey on the major stores in the area, and we will follow the lead of those stores," she said Monday. "We will not be open on Sundays."

Mrs. Weiss said the survey showed major stores in the area which closed on Sunday were successful during the rest of the week.

She said the new Mervyn's store being added to the University Mall in Orem is scheduled to open in July.

Bob Cann, marketing director for University Mall, said officials there had received no further word on Mervyn's status on Sunday opening.

He said if Mervyn's did close, the majority of the community that does not shop on Sundays should be happy to hear it.

"Those who shop on Sundays, however, probably won't be happy," Cann said.

Egyptian project may include Y

D. Delos Ellsworth, director of the Ezra Taft Benson Agriculture and Food Institute, returned from a two-week business trip to Egypt, where Egyptian President Anwar Sadat proposed a plan to involve BYU in an agricultural project in Sadat's native town.

D. DELOS ELLSWORTH

"We have been invited to participate in an Egyptian project that will include the American University in Cairo and the University of Menoufia, a university located in Egypt," said Ellsworth.

Ellsworth commented that Menoufia is like a state. "Just outside of Menoufia there is a small town called Mit Abul Kom, where Sadat was born."

Sadat is using money from his Nobel Peace Prize to write an autobiography from his memoirs. The royalties from the autobiography will go to rebuild his native village," said Ellsworth. He added, "We are to help the farmers in this village become more productive, increase their income and at the same time create more jobs for people in the village. The village is to serve as a model to the rest of Egypt."

Ellsworth said he plans to prepare a summary of what BYU will do while in Egypt. He also will make an outline of the cooperation between BYU and the University of Menoufia on the project, he said, adding, he will give this to the authorities sometime in April or May.

"If the authorities agree to the summary and outline, that will formalize our entry into the project, and it looks very likely that they will," Ellsworth said. "If they accept the plan we may have people working there this summer."

The project is long range and will cover several years, he said.

The Egyptians accepted him very well and very much want BYU to be a part of the project, Ellsworth said. "It is a poor country, and we will be working in small villages with the peasants," he said.
